YODEP Study — Yoruba-English Acted Depression Speech Corpus

My name is Peace Bakare. I am a Master's student in Information Technology at Carnegie Mellon University Africa. I invite you to participate in a research study titled 'YODEP: Yoruba-English Acted Depression Speech Corpus.' The session will take approximately 20 minutes.

During the study, you will be asked to read five short sentences twice — once in a natural, everyday tone, and once while performing the emotional state of a person experiencing depression. You will do this in both English and Yoruba. You will not be asked any personal questions about your mental health, medical history, or personal life.

The study presents minimal risks. The emotional scenario used to prompt the acted depressed condition may feel mildly uncomfortable. You will be given time to settle before recording, and a brief check-in will take place at the end of the session. Your participation is entirely voluntary. You may choose to skip any sentence, pause, or withdraw from the study at any time without any consequences.

Your voice recordings will be anonymised — your name will not be attached to any audio file that is released. The dataset will be made publicly available on GitHub for academic research use under a Creative Commons Attribution (CC BY 4.0) licence. Your name or initials will appear in the dataset acknowledgements and in any resulting publication, according to your preference as indicated below.

If you have concerns about this study or your rights as a participant, you may contact Prof. Prasenjit Mitra (prasenjm@andrew.cmu.edu), CMU Africa.
